THE MILK REGULATIONS.

A Case from Buffalo-Local Wells Being Condemned.

Some people have been inclined to think that the restrictions which have recently been thrown around the sale of milk by the health department are a useless lot of red tape. The following editorial from the New York Times shows what experience has

The history of a group of cases of typhoid fever in Buffalo is instructive. These cases attracted the attention of the city's health department a few days ago. Six families are infected, and to all of them milk has been supplied by a dealer named Staub. The fever is of a severe type, and two patients in these families have died of it. Investigation showed that the dairy from which the milk was obtained by Staub was clean and in excellent sanitary condition. Milk is taken from it by three other dealers, and there are no cases of typhoid in the families which they serve. But a case was found in the house where Staub lives and where the milk which he delivers is poured from cans into bottles. The history of many other milk epidemics of typhoid leaves no room for doubt as to the source of infection in this instance. The record of the inquiry, which was made as to the source of infection in this instance.

The record of the inquiry, which was made promptly and intelligently, shows that Buffalo has a good health department. The lesson afforded by all such experiences, however, is that the sources of the milk supply in every city should be subjected to sanitary inspection. No dealer should be permitted to deliver milk to consumers while there is a case of typhoid tever or any other highly infectious disease in his house, nor should milk be distributed from a dairy farm when there is a case of such disease on the premises. There is conclusive proof that thousands of cases of typhoid fever and hundreds of deaths due to that disease have been caused by the distribution of milk from farmhouses or other buildings where it had been exposed to infection with the germs of this malady.

The rules recently adopted by the Board of Health are sufficient, if closely carried out, to prevent any such contagion as mentioned in the Times article. They provide that no milk shall be sold by any person in whose family there is a contagious disease, and this applies to dairies as well as dealers. There is also ample provision for the examnation of the premises of all dairies. This is now being done by the department. Inspec-tor Arnold has condemned and closed a numper of wells where it was found that the water contained proof that it received, through drainage, the fecal matter from vaults, even in a very small quantity. As soon as the dairies have all been examined will be required to observe the rules of the board, one of which is that all cans must e sterilized before being returned to the Chemists Say Mark C. Davis's Receipt from John Lehman Was Written with Two Kinds of Ink.

The suit of the Union Trust Company against Mark C. Davis, to foreclose a $1,600 mortgage, came up before Judge Brown vesterday morning. The attorneys for the trust company came into court prepared to show that a receipt held by Davis, showing that the mortgage had been satisfied, had been tampered with and they proposed to show by expert testimony that there had been an addition made to the original re-

The mortgage which the trust company is trying to foreclose was executed by Davis to John Lehman, in 1890. Lehman died in 1894, and the trust company was appointed administrator of his estate. When the suit for foreclosure was brought Davis exhibited the note and mortgage which he had executed to Lehman, together with a receipt signed by the latter. The instrument read as follows:

"Received from M. C. Davis ninety-six, $96, for one year's interest on mortgage note dated Aug. 10, 1892, and sixteen hundred, $1,600, principal due on said note.

"JOHN LEHMAN."

Davis's attorneys objected yesterday to the introduction of expert testimony, conending that their client had turned over the receipt to the court to have it photographed and that the attorneys had no Judge Brown held, however, that expert testimony was competent. Dr. J. N. Hurty, who had subjected the receipt to a microscopical examination, testified that, in his opinion, it was clear that the receipt had been tampered with. He had made a critical study of the handwriting and had discovered that two different inks had been used. These two inks, he said, had been made from different material, but he thought the signature and that part of the receipt showing the payment of the interest receipt showing the payment of the interest had been written in the same kind of ink. The words: "And sixteen hundred, $1,600, principal due on said note," had been written in a reddish-brown black ink, while a

Dr. Henry Jameson was called as an exert witness and testified that the receipt showed evidences that the words relating to the principal had been added after the receipt had been carried in the pocket for some time; also, that the figures "16," in front of the "96," in the upper left-hand corner, had been added. Dr. Jameson said that a chemical analysis showed that different inks had been used. The attorneys for the defense recalled Dr. flurty for cross-examination, but did not succeed in shaking his direct testimony. Monday morning the note and mortgage will be introduced in evidence and it will then remain for the court to decide who is entitled to the documents.

THREE NAMES IN ONE DAY.

Mary Owens Becomes Mary Vail by Divorce and Then Mrs. Ostermeyer. The rapidity with which Mary Morgan changed her name and surroundings yesterday was something marvelous to that lady's friends. At 10 o'clock she went into the Superior Court as "Mary Owens." At 11 o'clock she was "Mary Vail," and twenty minutes later she was "Mary Ostermeyer." The divorce suit of Mary Owens against Chadwick Owens had been pending for a year, and came up before Judge Bartholo-mew yesterday morning. Mrs. Owens charged her husband with cruel treatment and desertion. They were married in Cin-cinnati in 1894, but have lived here for over a year. Judge Bartholomew granted the di-vorce and restored the plaintiff's maiden name, Mary Vall. At the court room door Henry Ostermeyer, of West Indianapolis, was waiting for the divorced woman, and the pair proceeded directly to the office of Justice ockman. In less than twenty minutes after the divorce had been secured the couple became husband and wife. The new Mrs. Ospearance and looks to be about twenty-eight years old. Ostermeyer is twenty-six. They went at once to the groom's home in West Indianapelis.

Under a New Law. Edgar Ballard was arrested and brought before the Circuit Court yesterday under the fraudulent marriage act passed by the Eva Lou Pearson, No. 400 Broadway, for a last Legislature. Some time ago Ballard, it is scharged, became the husband of May Reynolds to avoid a paternity suit. He declined to live with her and she caused his arrest under the new law, which provides that where a man unites himself in marriage to avoid prosecution he must live with her for two years. Will Cost Frank Helwig $7,000. A judgment for $7,000 against Frank E. Helwig was entered in Room 2, Superior Court, yesterday. This judgment grew out of the damage suit of Iley H. Beckner against Mr. Helwig for maliclous prosecution. The jury found a special verdict for $7,000 and Judge Harvey decided that the laintiff was entitled to the amount under he evidence. The case will be taken to the Supreme Court by the defendant.

Abandoned Him Seven Times. William T. Shearer brought suit yesterday for divorce from Nellie Shearer, to whom he was married in 1893. He says the defendant has, since the marriage, abandoned him seven different times, and has cursed him and avowed her affection for other men, She has also brought him into disrepute with his employers, it is charged, by suing him and making his employers party de-

Damage Suit for $25,000. W. R. Stevens, of Elwood, has a filed suit in the United States Court asking the Diamond Plate Glass Company, asking for $25,000 because of injuries received while employed in the company's plant. Stevens alleges that he was crippled while at work.

Will of Andrew A. Helfer. The will of Andrew A. Helfer was probated in the Circuit Court yesterday, the testator leaving all of his estate to his wife, Clarissa Helfer. The latter was named as the executor.

A meeting of incorporators was held trolley slipped off the wire, and the pole caught in a frog. The conductor was unable to get the trolley pole disengaged and the car forged ahead, dragging down the wire. A moment later the right arm of the first pole west snapped off, taking down with it a string of wire 125 feet long. In a few minutes the street was blocked with several cars on a "dead" circuit. At that hour in the morning traffic is very heavy on Washington street, and the streets were jammed with cars and vehicles of all descriptions. Car 525 was covered with wires, and the crews of the different cars handled them gingerly in their efforts to clear the car. As a curious crowd gathered to watch the men at work, shouts of warning were frequently heard as people who knew nothing of what had occurred attempted to cross the streets. It was nearly an hour before the linemen got the break repaired, and the streets were blockaded for several squares with the cars that stood idly waiting until the damage could be remedied. No one was seriously hurt, although one of the linemen received a severe shock from two live wires. yesterday afternoon. Among those present were ex-Judge Byron K. Elliott, H. H. Hanna, John H. Holliday, Dr. O. S. Runnels, Dr. John Kolmar and Dr. Joseph Eastman. The lines upon which the institution will be conducted have been practically agreed upon, and within a short time the corporation will be formed. A site for the hospital will be secured and every effort made to erect the buildings this summer. Physicians throughout the State are becoming interested in the undertaking. Dr. John Kolmar has, in response to invitations from prominent medical men, visited a number of towns of the State in the interest of the

All day long there was a changing crowd of from 300 to 500 gooduation. The burgler held up the trousers and took in the shapely contour of the leg. Apparently he was pleased with the pattern, for natured people waiting to be let in the store. The front doors of the store, guarded by he thrust the watch and money back into the pockets and tucked the pantaloons under his policemen, were opened at intervals in order to give part of the crowd a chance to get into the store. Customers that had made hung the assessor's coat, and lifted the gartheir purchases were passed out a side door. It was necessary to keep a force of policemen on duty throughout the day and even-ing to preserve order. The crowds became so large that the managers of the store While Mr. Saulcy was thus cogitating the hoped it would rain and so diminish the crowd that they might have a chance to straighten the stock, which had become burglar was retreating.
